Notes:

This "original" deed was apparently never recorded; at least there is no such record currently on file at the Queens County NY Register. The document was obtained by the compiler of this article via Ebay, and there is no information regarding the provenance of the document. Sackett Leverich (1750-1811) and Richard Leverich (1757-1836) were brothers, the children of John Leverich Jr and Elizabeth Sackett. Sackett Leverich never married. There is no record of a "Phebe" Leverich in Newtown in this time period. The "Phebe Leverich" who witnessed this deed was likely Amy Leverich, the first wife of Richard Leverich.

A related deed, also unrecorded, executed 18 March 1800, is in the custody of Stephen Shaw of Connecticut. In this deed Amey Leverich (1744-1812), sister of Sackett Leverich and Richard Leverich, transfers her 1/12 share in the same property to her two brothers, in consideration of a payment of 200 pounds. This deed was also witnessed by "Phebe Leverich" and Samuel Riker.

Drawings of Leverich Homestead by Susan M. Leverich

Susan M. Leverich, a 7th generation descendent of the Rev. William Leverich, was born in Newtown, Queens Co, Long Island, New York in 1836. She was the daughter of Richard Leverich and Nancy Lane. With her mother Nancy and her sister Amy, they were the last members of the Leverich family to live in the old homestead on Trains Meadow Road in Newtown. Amy married Charles E. Cannon in 1857. By 1860, Amy and Charles Cannon, as well as Susan and Nancy Leverich, were living together in Manhattan at 132 East 36th St. Nancy died in 1874. Charles E. Cannon died c 1882-1884. By 1886, Amy Cannon, a widow, her two daughters, and Susan Leverich, who never married, were living in Bridgeport, CT at 525 Clinton Ave. Amy died there in 1911. Susan died there in 1920.

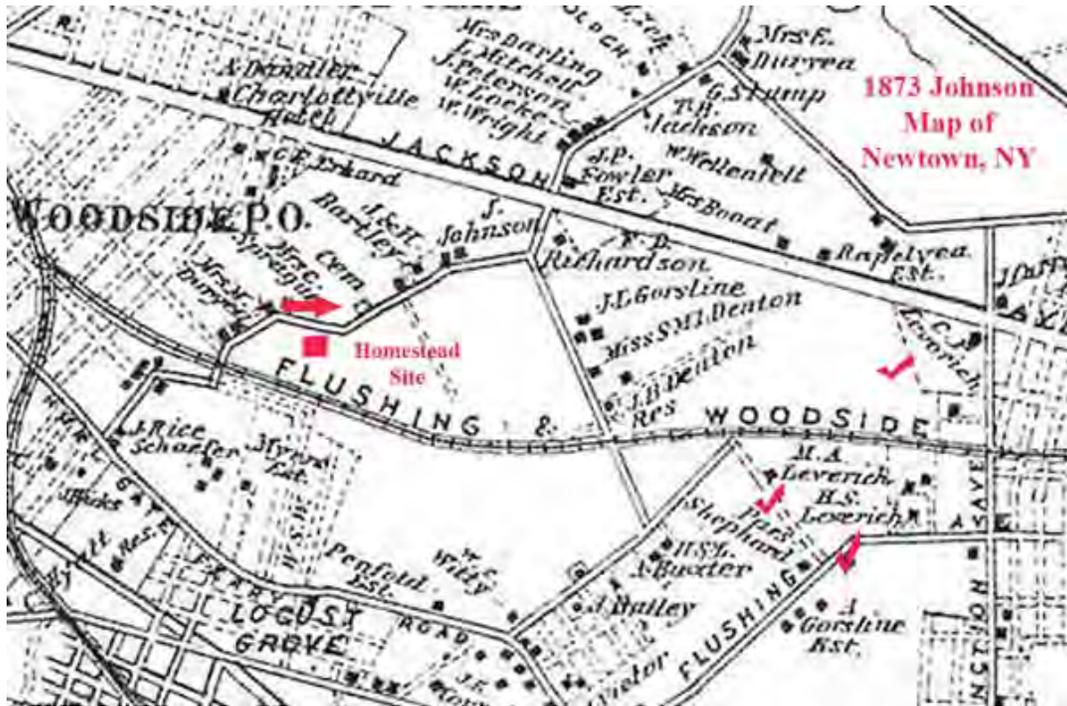

Susan M. Leverich was a family historian and her writings, correspondence, drawings, and her collection of original family documents (as early as 1658) have been passed down through many generations. Stephen Payson Shaw, the current custodian of the papers, is a 3rd great grandson of Amy Leverich Cannon, the sister of Susan M. Leverich. Stephen is a 12th generation descendent of the Rev. William Leverich. Susan's papers include two notebooks. A House in the Olden Time records a history of the Leverich homestead and Susan's recollections of living there. My Childhood's Home contains the drawings of the old homestead, and a series of poems about the old homestead.

The Newtown Register, 19 April 1888, page 8. Old Newtown and Confines: Selections from the Town Scrap Book Originally Written by William O'Gorman, Town Clerk: Train's Meadow. "... The property of the late Deacon Richard Leverich at Train's Meadows, was in possession of the family previous to 1677. The tract of peat or turf meadow attached to the farm was given by Newtown (then called Middleburgh) to the Rev. William Leveridge <Leverich>, first <actually second> pastor of the church there, and ancestor of the family, as payment for services. The old family burial ground was given by the grandfather of Deacon Richard for family burial purposes, and the ground between it and the large rock adjoining was the resting place of slaves attached to the property. This large stone was regarded with great superstition by the colored population even at a later day. Part of the old homestead was built in 1732 ... <Susan M. Leverich states that the original part of the house was built prior to 1670, with an addition built in 1732>. It was occupied during the Revolutionary War by the Royal Highland Regiment, Col. Thomas Sterling commander".

Drawing by Susan M. Leverich

The Newtown Register, 15 October 1891, page 8. A House One Hundred and Fifty Years Old. "Antiquarians in Newtown may like to know that one of the oldest houses in the town is to be found on the Hell Gate Road <actually Train's Meadows Road>, near Woodside. It was built over a century and a half ago, the date of its erection - 1732 - being cut deep in a stone set directly over the rear hall-door. The house is of the old Colonial style of architecture, with a steep slanting roof, small windows with tiny panes of glass, and many other quaint and curious old-time features. It is extremely well built, of brick <actually stone> and wood, and is still <1891> sound and entire. Originally the property of the Leverich family, it passed out of their hands many years ago; and it is now occupied by Geo. Paffmann, being one of the few remaining old landmarks of Newtown, now rapidly passing away. On the opposite side of the road, a short distance off, is an old and neglected graveyard, with about two dozen headstones standing midst weeds and brambles grown so thick that one can hardly penetrate them. The inscription on these stones show that they all mark the last resting place of members of the Leverich family - doubtless the same who built the old mansion <actually a modest farm house> just described. The dates on the stones are all of the latter part of the last century and the early part of this century <19th>. Without a doubt the family who built the mansion owned a farm stretching round it for many acres and this was their private burial place, situated, as was the custom in those days, on their own grounds."

OLD HOMESTEAD BURNED.

One of Newtown's Landmarks,
Leverich Homestead, Partly Destroyed and Now a Ruin.

The ancient two story stone farm house known as the old Leverich homestead on the Trains Meadow road, between Winfield and Woodside, was partly destroyed by fire last Thursday night. What is left of the building is in a ruinous condition and will have to be torn down. The house belonged to the Terminal Heights Realty Co. and was unoccupied. The fire was discovered about 11.30 o'clock. It started on the second floor and it is thought to have been the work of an incendiary. An alarm was given, which was promptly answered by Companies Nos. 2 and 3. The firemen quickly had a stream of water on the house, but the flames had gained such headway before the fire was discovered that the entire upper story was destroyed and the lower floor gutted before the blaze could be extinguished. The loss is estimated at about $500.

The house was a well known landmark in the locality where it is situated. The eastern end of the building was erected in 1670 by Caleb Leverich, the son of the Rev. William Leverich, who was the first of that family to come to the old town of Newtown. The house was enlarged in 1732 by John Leverich, the grandson of Caleb. The place was owned and occupied by the Leverich family until about 1876. The last of that family to occupy it was Deacon Richard Leverich who died in 1836. His widow and family resided there until after the death of Mrs. Leverich, which occurred in November, 1874. The place then passed out of the family. The large farm on which the house stood was patented from the Indians by the Rev. William Leverich.

During the Revolution the members of the Royal Highland 42nd Regiment with Lieut. Col. Thomas Stirling in command, made their headquarters on the place. Just a little east of the house on the opposite side of the road can still be seen the old Leverich burial place where many of the older members of the family are interred. The destruction of this old homestead marks the passing of the last ancient landmark of old Newtown in that locality. The only other houses in the town of about the same age as this one is the residence of Mr. Oliver H. Perry in Elmhurst, known as the Moore homestead built in 1664, and the "Corner House" in the same village erected in 1700.

LEVERICH FAMILY BURIAL GROUND QUEENS COUNTY, NEW YORK

The Leverich Family Burial Ground was situated on Train's Meadow Road, in the Train's Meadow section of Newtown, in the 17th-19th centuries, across the road from the family homestead, which burned down in 1909 (contemporary location 35th Road at 70th Street, southeast corner). This historic site is now over 300 years old.

The contemporary location of the burial ground is a rectangular plot of land located immediately behind the rear yards of several private residences that face on Leverich Street, and on the other side immediately behind a parking lot behind several apartment buildings that face on 35th Avenue at the intersection of 71st Street. There is no public access. This location is on the western edge of what is now known as the community of Jackson Heights, and just east of the community now known as Woodside. It lies within the western boundary of the Jackson Heights Garden City Historic Register District which is listed on both the Federal and New York State Registers of Historic Places. Earlier in history it was known as the Train's Meadow section of Newtown, and was located north of the Train's Meadow Road, just northeast of the family homestead which was located south of the Train's Meadow Road.

Unfortunately, the site is in poor condition. Although the area was cleaned of debris, and fenced in, by the City of New York in October 2002, the area is now <2012> again overgrown with vegetation. There are no signs of any grave markers, and one would never know from its appearance that it was an old cemetery. The property is currently described as block 1271, Lot 67 and has the following dimensions: 59.29' on the north, 132.32' on the east, 55.37' on the south, and 138.53' on the west. The lot abuts Lots Numbers 61-66 on its west side, the backyards of private homes fronting on Leverich Street.

The Burial Ground is apparently an "orphan property". Research regarding the ownership of the plot discloses that the owner, according to New York City property records, is "Leverich Burial Ground". No individual is identified. On June 14, 2001 the City of New York sold a tax lien on hundreds of properties, including the burial ground, to Capitol Assets and J.E. Roberts. The computer file records the assessed value of the lot as $41,052 and the property taxes due as $2,074.00. This of course is an error, since the burial ground by its nature, regardless of ownership, is a nonprofit entity and not subject to property taxes. The Queens Historical Society successfully contacted the City Government to get this error corrected. A letter dated November 28, 2001 to the Historical Society from the City of New York Department of Finance states:

This parcel has been removed from the Tax Lien Sale for the following year(s): June 1, 2001. The exemption for this property was removed erroneously. We have taken the necessary steps to restore the exemption on this property. At this time we have also removed the tax lien from this property due to the restoration of the exemption.

In July 2002, the compiler of this paper participated in a meeting of community activists in Jackson Heights which included representatives of Community Board Number 3, The Queens Historical Society, the Jackson Heights Garden City Society, and the Office of Congressman Joseph Crowley. At the time, there was considerable interest in restoring and preserving the burial ground property. However, since that time interest has waned and there currently exists no restoration activity.

It would be necessary to determine how to vest property title for the burial ground in the historical society and/or other nonprofit community groups interested in restoring and preserving the property. Thereafter, arrangements would need to be made for public access, since the property is “land locked” by other private properties. It would also appear that some neighboring properties may have inadvertently encroached on the burial ground property, and addressing those matters would be a sensitive undertaking.

It would appear likely that the family homestead, built by 2-Caleb Leverich about 1670, but not the burial ground, passed through the first born sons of generations two through five (see chart below). Caleb’s grandson, 4-John Leverich, built an addition to the homestead in 1732.

Both 4-John Leverich and his son 5-John Leverich died in 1780. In a deed dated 1 March 1781 (recorded 10 June 1796) 5-William Leverich, 5-Elnathan Leverich (sons of 4-John Leverich), and 6-Samuel Leverich (son of 5-Samuel Leverich and grandson of 4-John Leverich) sold the property to their nephew and first cousin, respectively, 6-Sackett Leverich (son of 5-John Leverich). The sale of the homestead and farm specifically excluded the burial ground:

“And is bounded as follows (viz) first the homestead above the road that leads around Trains Meadow northerly by the said road & the land of John Moore Senr Eastwardly by the land of John Alburtyss late dec southerly ??? ??? by the road from said to Halletts Cove Westerly and Southerly again by the land of Jacob Palmer & westerly again by the aforementioned road around Trains Meadow secondly a piece or parcel of meadow below the aforementioned road southerly by the said road southwesterly by the swamp and meadow of Richard Moore Northwesterly by the ??? ??? or meadow of Nathaniel Moore Sr & northeasterly by the meadow of John Moore & thirdly a piece of salt meadow northerly by the meadow of Charles Booram & William Betts late dec easterly by the meadow of John Moore Sr ??? southerly by the meadow of Nicholas Wickoff & Johannes Debevoise and westerly by the meadow of Abraham Brinkerhoff late dec one quarter of an acre within the said bounderies excepted for a family burial place forever bounded southeasterly by the s Read round.”

In another land transaction dated 2 May 1785, 6-Samuel Leverich sells land to his first cousin 6-Richard Leverich, which borders, but does not include, the burial ground. In a deed dated 19 March 1800, Sackett Leverich sells to his brother 6-Richard Leverich a share in the homestead property. This deed again specifically excludes the burial ground: "one quarter of an acre within the said boundaries excepted for a Family burying place forever". Sackett Leverich died unmarried 14 May 1811, and Richard Leverich took out letters of administration on Sackett's estate on 1 June 1811.

As a result, it would appear that the burial ground has remained throughout the passage of time as a separate parcel of land, with no specific ownership, other than the perceived generic ownership of the Leverich Family which now includes thousands of descendants dispersed throughout the USA.

There is no record of an estate for Richard Leverich, who died 21 May 1836. Richard's widow Nancy Leverich and her daughters Amy Leverich (Cannon) and Susan M. Leverich, appear to be the last family members to occupy the family farm and homestead. James Riker's 1852 map of Newtown records Nancy at the Trains Meadow Road location, and Nancy and her daughters are recorded in the 1850 census of Queens County. By the time of the 1860 census, Nancy and her daughters are living in Manhattan in the household of her son-in-law Charles Cannon. An 1873 map of Newtown marks an unnamed cemetery at the pertinent location on Trains Meadow Road, but does not include any reference to a Leverich living in the immediate vicinity. Amy Cannon, a widow, and her unmarried sister Susan M. Leverich, are living in Bridgeport, Connecticut at the time of the 1900 census. Amy Cannon died at Bridgeport in 1911, as did Susan M. Leverich in 1920. The homestead survived until 1909 when it was destroyed by fire. At that time the homestead property was owned by the Terminal Heights Realty Company

Nancy, Amy, and Susan Leverich are recorded as selling property in Newtown 24 December 1853 and 30 March 1857. However, the property descriptions in these deeds do not appear to pertain to the family homestead and farm, but to other property located south of Newtown Village. There are no references to the Family Burial Ground. It is not yet known when exactly the family homestead and farm left the family. More research is needed. It may be that Nancy leased out the house and land when they moved to Manhattan, and that the property was sold at some point thereafter by her daughters Amy Leverich Cannon and Susan M. Leverich, after Nancy Leverich passed away on 23 November 1874. Richard and Nancy Leverich were both buried at the Newtown Presbyterian Church grave yard, not the family burial ground.

Further research is needed to determine any pertinent land transactions by Amy Elizabeth Leverich Cannon. Amy was granted letters of administration on her mother Nancy's estate by the New York County Surrogate 25 May 1875, but this record makes no references to pertinent land holdings. There is a record of letters of administration on the estate of Amy granted to her two daughters on file at Bridgeport, Connecticut 11 October 1911, but it makes no reference to any property owned by Amy in Queens. There does not appear to be any subsequent land transactions in Queens County in the name of Susan M. Leverich, nor is there a record of an estate for Susan in Bridgeport.

Transcriptions of grave stones in the Leverich Family Burial Ground were made by historian James Riker about 1842 (see chart below and list of sources) and historian Arthur White about 1907 (see list of sources).

In March of 2008, the compiler of this paper discussed the burial ground in a telephone conversation with Amanda Sutphin, Director of Archaeology, New York City Landmarks Commission. Although written documentation was subsequently provided, no further interest was expressed, and no further response was received.
